Working on the weekends can be a great fit for one person’s schedule and a terrible strain on another person’s time. My experiences have shown both the advantages and disadvantages of such a schedule. I was quite happy working long weekend hours last semester, at that time, I had a light course load at college. I was able to do my assigned reading and studying during the week then I could put in many weekend hours as a pizza delivery person. The money was good, and I managed to get fairly good grades for the term. This semester is a much more difficult one, I am taking an advanced math class and a chemistry class. Both of these classes demand hours of study soon the extra study time stretched well into the weekend. First, I had to reduce my hours at the pizza shop later, I had to quit the job. Next semester, I have to take another chemistry class and a challenging physics class. During that semester, I will look for part-time work on weeknights and save my weekends for hours of study.
